

Peter Frank is an ecologist and small business owner, specializing in invasive species management and planning. His company is located in southeast North Carolina, where he has been working with the U.S. Army on Fort Bragg to prevent and mitigate the impacts invasive plants pose to troop training, threatened and endangered species management, and recreation programs. In addition to controlling invasive plants, Peter also collaborates on multiple research projects related to invasive plant inventories, and prioritizing invasive plant management.